Square One Community has been working on the production of a new documentary focussing in on issues around homelessness in Moose Jaw, and just released two teaser trailers in anticipation of the film’s introduction. The trailers timely release coincides with World Homeless Day being recognized on October 10th, a time to bring awareness on issues related to homelessness and to spark discussions on factors that contribute to homelessness.

Having just completed the 2024 Point in Time (PiT) Count, Square One Community is working with partners in Moose Jaw to learn and share factual information on the complexities of homelessness, and to advocate for and develop a continuum of programs and services to support our most vulnerable citizens. These services include, but are not limited to, emergency shelter spaces; meal programs; outreach responses; and supportive housing spaces-- all of which support folks to move toward securing and maintaining independent living in safe and affordable housing.

In short time, Square One Community will be announcing the premiere of their locally filmed documentary. This thirty-minute film invites the viewer into the lives of two lived-experience individuals and also addresses some of the common myths associated with the homelessness situation in Moose Jaw.

As an opportunity to promote awareness and engage community members in open discussions on homelessness, Square One Community is pleased to unveil the first trailers for their upcoming film. Stay turned for more information on the premiere of "A Home to Call My Own".
